Israel Is Firm In Stand On Jerusalem

Israel told the United Nations that an international regime for Jerusalem would "convulse the city in widespread discontent and confusion."

In a thirty-six-page memorandum submitted to the Special Political Committee of the General Assembly, Israel rejected the draft statute of the Palestine Conciliation Commission, as proposed last September in Lausanne, for international control of the Arab and Jewish sectors of the divided city.

The Israeli statement contained no direct reference to a clarification of the international plan, issued by the commission, which stressed that United Nations organs would normally act only in an "advisory and consultatory capacity," leaving the conduct of local administration to Israeli and Arab authorities in Jerusalem.

Whatever may have been the intended meaning of the commission's proposal of last September, its statement had the effect of bringing its position much closer to that of the Israeli delegation on two basic points involved: protection of Holy places and guarantee of the right of access to them; and autonomy for the Jewish and Arab inhabitants of Jerusalem. However, the exact terms under which these two points are to be carried out remain to be drafted when the Assembly's Special Political Committee takes up the problem, probably late this month the New York Times surmises.

Sharp differences of opinion re- [illegible] however, on the commission's [illegible] the demilitarization [illegible] Israel reiterated her [illegible] render her arms [illegible] [illegible] from J[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] fully.

Turning to the legal side of the problem, the Israeli delegation charged the conciliation group with seeking to nullify the Israeli-Jordanian armistice agreement through a "unilateral" decision of the General Assembly to demilitarize the area and place it under international administration.

Israel stood ready at any time to negotiate with the United Nations for international guarantees of free access to the holy places under her jurisdiction, the memorandum declared, but the Tel Aviv regime could never accept the "administrative or judicial intrusions in the secular life of Jerusalem as envisaged by the commission."

New Head Of A.J.C. To Succeed Wise Is Rabbi

Rabbi Irving Miller of Woodmere, L. I., New York, was elected president of the American Jewish Congress to succeed the late Dr. Stephen S. Wise. Dr. Miller is rabbi of Congregation Sons of Israel, Woodmere; a vice-president of the Zionist Organization of America, and a member of the actions committee of the World Zionist Organization and the executive committee of the World Jewish Congress. He is on the national executive committee of the United Jewish Appeal and associate chairman of the United Jewish Appeal in New York. Dr. Miller was elected at the closing session of the Congress' biennial convention at the New Yorker Hotel in New York.

Later, at the convention dinner at the Statler Hotel, the new president pledged the Congress to intensified effort for development of cultural and spiritual ties with the Jewish community in Israel, for the campaign for civil rights in the U.S., for the awakening of American opinion to the dangers of a renascent German nationalism and for deepened appreciation of Jewish cultural values and traditions.

"We are encouraged by the knowledge that men of good-will throughout the world, and particularly in this country, have come to recognize the oneness of our problems," Rabbi Miller said: "A thriving democratic Israel will bless not only its Jewish citizens and the Jewish people, but all peoples throughout the Middle East. Denial of rights to any groups endangers the rights of all groups. It is in this recognition that our greatest hope lies. Bnai Brith Official Charges Neglect Of Home Needs For Those Overseas

Supreme Court Justice Meier Steinbrink of New York, national chairman of the Anti-Defamation League of Bnai Brith, declared at Detroit, Mich., that prolonged emphasis on Jewish overseas needs had led American Jews to neglect the needs of Jewish welfare and civic agencies in America.

Citing the support of overseas relief movements and aid to Israel by American Jews, the New York jurist emphasized that "now the accumulated problems of our Jewish communal life in this country can be neglected no longer."

His address opened the fourth annual meeting of the national council of the Joint Defense Appeal, the fund-raising arm of the Anti-Defamation League and the American Jewish Committee, both of which are devoted to fighting anti-Semitism, the promotion of civil rights and inter-group relations, says the New York Times.

The three-day conference centered its discussions on anti-semitism and the setting of a fund goal to carry out the programs of both the League and the American Jewish Committee for next year.

Justice Steinbrink touched on the problems affecting the Jewish people in the United States. Asserting that American Jewry had whole-heartedly supported the overseas rescue movement and the establishment of Israel, Justice Steinbrink declared: "Not all of us could see eye to eye with the ideological drives that went along with the rescue movements. But we did not avail. We were concerned with only one thing — the rescue of the remnant, no matter what the cost.

"Now, however, the accumulated problems of our Jewish communal life in this [illegible]

He praised the [illegible] of the League and the AJC in [illegible] to invoke the "three great dynamic forces of democratic progress — education, public opinion and law," and cited the rejection by Jefferson Military College of Natchez, Miss., of a bequest which could have amounted to $50,000,000 "to teach white supremacy." He also called attention to the fact that twenty-five Southern cities and Alabama had prohibited the use of masks or hoods in public demonstrations, saying that these now constituted a criminal offense. "Such legislation was first suggested by our agencies," Justice Steinbrink said.

On the subject of emphasis on overseas needs, Justice Steinbrink declared that "American Jewish life—the synagogue, Jewish education, civic service, community relations and all other facets of our communities — have not even fig- [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] States in the eyes of world opinion."

Terming the need for America's "160-odd religious sects and sixty national-region groups to learn to live together in amity and dignity," the "Number One problem," Dr. Slawson declared the key to the solution lay in the shift from "philanthropy for the needy to healthy inter-sectarian and inter-group relations among our people."

An authority on community-relations problems, Dr. Slawson scores "faulty teaching during the early life of the child by religious educators who do not fully represent the role in civilization of members of other religious groups." Such teachings are "contributory factors to prejudice and group hostility in adult life," he said.

Dr. Slawson declared that programs of education and those designed for the expansion of civil rights of all Americans, regardless of group affiliations, must be conducted on an inter-sectarian, international basis so that "Americans of all faiths and races may unitedly stamp out this threat to our security and our dignified life as Americans."

The Jewish people, as members of a religious group "who have suffered more than any other people from discrimination must lend vigorous support to programs designed to foster inter-group amity," he added.

Subversive groups in the U.S. are seeking to destroy national unity "through large-scale cunning campaigns to aggravate racial, religious and ethnic bigotry and tensions," George N. Craig, national commander of the American Legion, charged.

Mr. Craig, first World War II veteran to head the Legion, emphasized that the control of group prejudice and the promotion of inter-group relations required close co-operation of all organizations and "all responsible citizens." He addressed the closing session of the annual meeting of the Joint Defense Appeal — the fund-raising arm of the American Jewish Committee and the Anti-Defamation League of Bnai Brith.

The conference, attended by 400 prominent Jewish leaders, representing forty-one states, adopted a 1950 goal of $6,561,215 to conduct the nation-wide operations of the Committee and the League which are devoted to combating bigotry and the improvement of civil liberties and group relations.

The conference re-elected Charles W. Morris, Louisville, Ky., chairman of the Joint Defense Appeal National Council. Mr. Morris has been prominently identified with leadership of the council since its

Israel Hopes For Tie With India

India's impending recognition of Israel is expected at Tel Aviv to be the turning point in Israeli relations with Asiatic countries. The step that Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru of India forecast in London was expected to be a signal for a stream of recognitions, with Iran, Ceylon, Nepal and possibly Pakistan among the first to follow India.

Hitherto only the Philippines and Nationalist China had recognized Israel de jure and Turkey had extended defacto recognition.

Another indication of the trend in Israeli policy of strengthening relations with Asiatic countries is the establishment of an Asia Division in the Israili Foreign Ministry. Previously, relations with Asia came under British Commonwealth divisions.

Israel pins a lot on friendship with India. As a Jewish state in a Moslem sea, Israel regards the closest non-Moslem state as a natural ally. Furthermore, India is seen as the potential leader of a third uni-nations bloc of countries seeking to remain aloof from East-West friction.

Meanwhile, Tel Aviv has proposed a legation level and nominated Eliahu Sasson, top behind-the-scenes negotiator with the Arabs, as Minister. Yaakov Shimoni, former director of the Middle East Division, was named head of the new Asia Division in the Foreign Ministry. The territorial line between the Middle East and Asia divisions is the Iran-Afghanistan border.

Aid To Israel Has First Claim, Z.O.A. Leaders Say

A deep-rooted cleavage in American-Jewish life was brought into the open when leaders of the Zionist Organization of America reaffirmed their view that aid to Israel must retain first claim on American philanthropy. A number of Zionist officials criticized in sharpest terms individuals and groups that have been asserting recently that a greater share of the American-Jewish philanthropic dollar should now go for domestic rather than Israeli purposes.

Daniel Frisch, president of the Z. O. A., speaking at a meeting of the organization's national administrative council at the Waldorf-Astoria, in New York, emphasized that the United Jewish Appeal, chief instrument of aid to Israel, must continue to have priority over all other Jewish agencies, according to the New York Herald Tribune.

"However pressing any Jewish communal need anywhere may be," Mr. Frisch asserted, "it cannot be compared at this moment in urgency with the need of caring for the hundreds of thousands whom the tidal wave of Jewish misery has swept into Israel from the seven seas of Jewish dispersion only to deposit them, hungry and shivering, on a wintry shore."

Rudolf G. Sonneborn, chairman of the Z. O. A. administrative council, in a bitter statement, said "The disease of isolationism, long rejected by America as a whole, is beginning to infect the American Jewish community. From sources which had never been known too strongly for their deep Jewish tradition and religiousness, we now hear demands for an America-first policy in American Jewry. At a time when the American government is extending its influence throughout the world and shoring up the friends of freedom and democracy everywhere, there is a small band of frightened Jews which is shouting that our security is imperiled, and that the whole of American Jewry should concern itself with their own small terror.

"I charge this band of freedom-Jews with un-Americanism. By its insistence that all energies and resources should be concerned with fighting anti-Semitism in America it is defaming this blessed land of ours. It is raising a hue and cry about anti-Semitism which is no worse today than ever before in our history."

Mr. Frisch in his report to the council disclosed that the Jewish Agency for Palestine and the World Confederation of General Zionists have agreed on a plan under which $1,250,000 is to be allocated for projects in Israel to be undertaken by the Z. O. A. These projects will include the establishment of two colonies. At the same time Mr. Frisch withdrew the Z. O. A.'s threat to raise funds independently of the U. J. A. if the funds he requested were not allocated.

Other major points made by Mr. Frisch were: That Dr. Abba Hillel Silver, who resigned recently as chairman of the American section of the Jewish Agency for Palestine, should be elected president

● CANADIAN FRIENDS of the Hebrew University, Allan Bronfman, national president, announced the creation of a special fund to honor Mr. Justice Rand, a member of the Supreme Court of Canada. Mr. Bronfman stated, "The Jewish Community of Ottawa recently gave birth to the Rand Fund by pledging $5,000 at a meeting in their city where they were addressed by the Canadian Jurist together with the Israel Ambassador to the United States, Eliahu Elath, American Ambassador Lawrence Steinhardt, and Professor Adolf Reifenberg, Dean of the Hebrew University's School of Agriculture. Lawrence Freiman, president of the Ottawa Jewish Community Council, announced to an audience of 1500 that Ottawa wished forever to [illegible] Rand in the [illegible] University and in the memory of all Jews, everywhere, in recognition and with gratitude for the high principles of Right and Justice which marked the well-known jurist's role in the creation of the State of Israel. Mr. Justice Rand, "in accepting the tribute spoke in the highest terms of the vital role of the Hebrew University in the new State of Israel and in the development of the Middle-East, as well as the institution's objective approach to problems of all people. It is to be hoped that the leadership given by Ottawa will be taken up by other Canadian Jewish communities resulting in arrangements being made for the establishment of a chair in the Law Faculty of the Hebrew University. The School of Law opened by the Hebrew University will provide the barristers trained especially to practice and develop the law of the new State of Israel."

Social Notes — Montreal

(Additional Montreal Social Notes On Pages Two And Three)

Mr. and Mrs. N. Rivelis, of North Bay, Ont., celebrated the bar-mitzvah of their son, Erwin Stanley, who was called to the Reading of the Law in Beth David Synagogue, in Montreal. Kiddush was followed by a luncheon for the immediate family and out-of-town guests. The following evening, a reception-dinner took place in the community hall of the Synagogue, with about one hundred and thirty-five guests present. Mrs. Rivelis received, wearing a cocoa-brown lace gown, over matching taffeta; and corsage of yellow Talisman roses, and green accessories. Mrs. B. Rivelis, Jeanne Mance Street, the grandmother, wore a black crepe afternoon dress, and had a corsage of red roses. The other grandparent present was J. Horovitz, Sherbrooke Street West. Miss Rheta Rivelis, sister of the bar-mitzvah, wore a toast-coloured net cocktail-length dress, over satin, and a wristlet of yellow roses. Larry Rosen, of Toronto, Ont., assisted in receiving. The room was decorated with pompons and chrysanthemums, of which an archway was fashioned, and there were centerpieces of similar flowers on the tables. Erwin Stanley addressed the guests in Jewish, English and Hebrew. There was a sweet-table and dancing in the evening, and photographs were taken. Mrs. Eugene Butler, Mr. and Mrs. L. Traub and son, Samuel, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. H. Himmel, of North Bay, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. Saul Atlin, Mr. and Mrs. David Gracey, Boris Silverstein, of Toronto, Ont.; Mrs. J. Wiesfeld, of Buffalo, N.Y.; and Mrs. S. Samler, of Baltimore, Md., were there.

Mesdames S. Lancit, Hutchison Street; H. Novick, Jeanne Mance Street; J. Brown, Trans Island Avenue; and A. Shoob, Fairmount Street, were hostesses at a linen shower at the Rucharest in honour of Miss Miriam Wexler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Moe Wexler, St. Urbain Street, and fiancee of Samuel Pronman, son of Reuben Pronman, St. Dominique Street, and the late Mrs. Goldie Pronman. Receiving, Mrs. Lancit wore a black faille dress, green felt hat, and accessories, and corsage of red roses; Mrs. Novick, a wine-coloured crepe dress, a grey felt hat, and corsage of white roses; Mrs. Brown, a brown silk dress, green felt hat, and corsage of coral-shaded roses; and Mrs. Shoob, a brown crepe dress, green velvet hat, and corsage of yellow roses. Mrs. Wexler, mother of the bride-elect, was in a rust-coloured crepe dress, and royal-blue velvet hat, with matching accessories, and a corsage of yellow roses; Mrs. Pronman wearing a wine-coloured crepe dress, black felt hat, and corsage of white roses. The honourees wore a toast-coloured taffeta dress, fashioned with a V-neckline, and three-quarter-length sleeves, the full skirt having oversized patch pockets, trimmed with gold embroidery; and a crown of yellow Tea roses. Yellow and pink roses and carnations decorated the table. About two hundred guests were there. Miss Wexler, who will be married on March 5, in Beth David Synagogue, was presented with flatware, service for six.

Mrs. S. Cohen, 805 McEachran Avenue, Montreal, president of the Council of Units of the Jewish Hospital of Hope, is the convener of the annual bazaar to be held on Wednesday, November 30, from 9 a.m. to 12 p.m., at 5711 Park Avenue.

Sitting behind a desk or working at a bench is a fine way to develop stiff, cramped muscles and unnecessary layers of fat. One way to relieve this condition is to walk to and from work at least part of the time. You'll be surprised at the difference it makes.

WIDOW OF RESTAURATEUR WAS KNOWN FOR BEAUTY

Mrs. Ray Schwartz, widow of Max Schwartz, who founded the Little Hungary Restaurant at 257 East Houston Street, in New York, in 1888, was buried in Hungarian Union Cemetery, Brooklyn, after a service at The Riverside Memorial Chapel, at Amsterdam Avenue and Seventy-sixth Street. She died on Sunday at the age of 84.

Born in New York on October 27, the same date on which the late President Theodore Roosevelt was born, Mrs. Schwartz and he always exchanged telegrams on their birthdays. Mr. Roosevelt was a patron of the restaurant, now a catering concern, while he was Police Commissioner and later President, and became a friend of the Schwartz couple.

Mrs. Schwartz was often referred to as the "Lillian Russell of little Hungary" because of her beauty. She was of Hungarian parentage. Her home was at 251 East Seventy-sixth Street. She devoted much of her time to philanthropy and was a founder of three organizations, the Hungarian Aid Society, the Independent Order of Brith Abraham and the United Ladies Aid Society, being the oldest member of the last named at her death.

Surviving are a son, William Schwartz; two daughters, Mrs. Leon Lees and Mrs. Gertrude S. Strauss; four grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

Vitamin A, found especially in milk, butter, eggs, liver, fish liver oils, leafy vegetables, carrots and other vegetables and fruits, is important for growth, for resistance to infection and for good sight in darkness. If deficiency symptoms persist although plenty of vitamin A foods are taken, a medical examination is in order.

MARRIAGES

MANUS-CARPMAN

The marriage of Miss Freda Carpman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Carpman, 917 Wilder Avenue, to Arnold Manus, son of Mr. and Mrs. Irving Manus, 1558 Ducharme Avenue, took place on Saturday, November 5, at seven o'clock, in Young Israel Center, Rabbi M. Lewittes, Cantor J. Eidelson and Rev. B. Shayne officiated. Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a tulle gown, fashioned with a form-fitting bodice having a round neckline, long sleeves, and a bouffant skirt, with appliqued satin trimming at the hemline, on the sleeves, and on the long train. Her headdress was of ostrich plumes, arranged over a tulle veil, and she carried mauve orchids and a white bible. Miss Esther Carpman, sister of the bride, was maid of honour, wearing a gold-coloured satin gown, having a form-fitting bodice and short train, with a matching headdress, trimmed with mauve ostrich plumes, and a bouquet of mauve carnations. Gilbert Rosenberg, cousin of the groom, was best man, and the ushers were: Jerry Cooper, Norman Glickman, Lawrence Carpman, Saul Lighter, Donald Manus, and David Eizenwasser, with Irwin Levy, in full dress, as page boy. The ceremony was by candlelight, with white pompoms forming an archway in the chapel. "Because" was sung. The reception took place in the community hall of the synagogue, which was decorated with pom-poms, ferns and palms, and centerpieces on the tables. Mrs. Carpman, mother of the bride, received, wearing an ecru-shaded lace gown, with cocoa-coloured feather hat, matching accessories, and corsage of orchids. Mrs. Manus, mother of the groom, wore brown lace over matching satin gown, having a little jacket; with a pink velvet hat, trimmed with ostrich feathers, and a corsage of pink gardenias. The bride and groom motored to New York; Miami Beach, Florida; Niagara Falls and Toronto, Ont.; and Washington, D.C., and will be away for one month. Mrs. Manus left in a navy-blue suit, grey fur jacket, rust-coloured accessories, and corsage of orchids. The couple will reside on Carlaton Place. Out-of-town guests present were: Mr. and Mrs. A. Posluns, Samuel Posluns, Mr. and Mrs. Al. Pasternak, of Toronto, Ont.; and Mr. and Mrs. Morris Ryant, of Ottawa, Ont.

Woman, 91, Helps Third Generation

The day Mrs. Rose Baran, founder of the New York Philanthropic League of the United Order of True Sisters, was 91 years old, she opened its two day "tag" drive for the orthopedically handicapped.

The prospect of rain could not dampen Mrs. Baran's determination to carry on her work of helping handicappepd children. Knowing that 1,000 women volunteers were jingling coin boxes in the five boroughs, she stood ready in the lobby of her home, Euclid Hall, 2345 Broadway, to solicit funds on the street.

Although Mrs. Baran wore rubbers, the sun came out as she stepped on the street. "Rose Baran weather," exclaimed Mrs. Leo Propper, league president.

Mrs. Propper is "almost a member of the family," having worked with Mrs. Baran since the league's inception thirty eight years ago. The gathering was a "family party," for Mrs. Baran's artist daughter, Mrs. Florence Baran Wise, 62, who already had nearly a full coin box to show for "tagging" the "baby-wheeling brigade" at Broadway and Eighty-sixth Street.

Mrs. Wise has six grandchildren. Mrs. Baran has six married grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren. Her youngest child, whom Mrs. Baran calls "my baby," is 54 years old.

The founder of the league explained to a passer-by that many coins were needed to build a $300,000 recreation centre for youngsters too handicapped to use city playgrounds. During fourteen years as league president Mrs. Baran devoted herself to fund-raising, primarily by staging concerts and recitals. She also solicited funds from patients of her husband, the late J. Philip Baran.

One day a teacher mentioned that 102 handicapped children had arrived at Public School 27 on East Forty-second Street with luncheons as stale rolls. Mrs. Baran, aided by True Sisters including Mrs. Propper, set up a kitchen and cooked hot lunches for the pupils.

This was the beginning of the league. Two years later the Board of Education initiated the hot lunch program for schools.

The league's work went on from headquarters at 150 West Eighty-fifth Street. It supports two therapeutically equipped schoolrooms at Public School 90 and James Munroe High School in the Bronx, where polio and palsy cases receive physiotherapy treatments. The league has a camp this year.

"There just isn't time to think about one's age," Mrs. Baran remarked. "I have helped three generations of handicapped children."

Hockey's First!

The Stanley Cup, today's emblem of N.H.L. Championship, was first won in 1894 by the Montreal AAA team . . . and for 17 years was a purely amateur trophy.

The rules of the rink have changed greatly since hockey's first organized game . . . 74 years ago.

It was a March day in 1875. The indoor ice of Montreal's Victoria Skating Rink was a swirl of uniformed figures. Spectators who lined the rails were watching the first attempt to organize the increasingly popular game of hockey.

The teams had been reduced to nine men a side . . . each with a definite position to cover. Instead of the familiar rubber ball, a flat, round block of wood was being used. And for the first time, the goals were protected by goaltenders. Regulation hockey had been born.

Hockey holds a proud tradition of sportsmanship for Canadians. And Canadian teamwork has made us world leaders in the game. Together, sportsmanship and teamwork are working for you . . . by keeping your opportunities for work and play in Canada . . . unlimited.

That's what I used to say, and it was true.

Sometimes I'd dream of the day when I'd have time and leisure to do all the things I wanted to do, but I had to admit I wasn't doing anything about it except dream. I never seemed to be able to put anything aside.

Now, I know those dreams will come true.

They're guaranteed.

Through a simple saving plan which, strangely enough, I've found involves no hardship, I am now saving money for the first time in my life.

SAYS IT COSTS MILLIONS TO ABSORB THOUSANDS

Robert Nathan, economist and consultant to the Jewish Agency, speaking in New York criticized those United States officials who, he said, sought to tie in American aid to Israel with a proposal to internationalize Jerusalem. Viewing pessimistically the likelihood of a loan to Israel, Mr. Nathan told the biennial convention of the American Jewish Congress in the New Yorker Hotel, in New York:

"I do not see intergovernment loans to Israel as likely soon because some people, including some of our own State Department diehards on Zionism, will make internationalization of Jerusalem and the repatriation of Arab refugees conditions of further economic aid. Neither is feasible."

Mr. Nathan related Israel's economic problems to large-scale immigration and asserted that it cost more to absorb people than to maintain them on relief. To absorb 20,000 persons a month required about $60,000,000 a month, he reported.

At another session, Dr. David Petegorsky, national executive director of the Congress, deplored the "false bogey of dual allegiance" which he said was being raised to frighten Jews "into frantic efforts to disassociate themselves" from Israel. America, he said, sees no anomaly in the concern of Jews over Israel's future, for America is the example of a free society based on the acceptance of the principle of "cultural pluralism."

Was Counsel For HIAS

Isidore Hershfield, eighty, for many years general counsel and Washington representative of the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society, of which he was a former board member, died at Emergency Hospital at Washington after a heart attack.

Mr. Hershfield was born in New York City and was graduated from the College of the City of New York in 1888 and from New York Law School in 1890. He came to Washington in 1923 as general counsel and Washington representative of the aid society after having been on the organization's board of directors, in New York for nineteen years.

He had worked for H. I. A. S. in 1915 in the Russian territory under German and Austrian occupation, [illegible] between 250,000 families in that area and their relatives in the United States. Between February, 1919, after the World War I armistice, and May 1922, he was in Poland almost continuously for the Joint Distribution Committee on Jewish Welfare Work, establishing a system of private relief remittances which resulted in nearly $9,000,000 worth of relief for Polish Jews.

In Washington he had been chairman of the Zionist Organization of America District, chairman of the United Palestine Appeal and a member of the board of directors of the Jewish Community Center. His only survivor is a son, Lawrence H. Hershfield, of Washington. Burial will be in the cemetery of the Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue in New York, of which he was a member.

CLASS IN COOKERY

CHOCOLATE FUDGE CAKE

one-half cup shortening or butter
one cup white sugar
one teaspoon vanilla
two well-beaten eggs
three squares bitter chocolate two teaspoons baking powder
one-half teaspoon baking soda one teaspoon salt
one and one-quarter cups milk
two cups sifted cake flour

Cream shortening, sugar and vanilla; until light and fluffy; add beaten eggs, and mix. Beat in melted chocolate; then add flour, baking powder, baking soda and salt which have been sifted together, alternately with the milk, beating until smooth. Pour into two greased nine-inch layer-cake tins, and bake for one-half hour in 350-degree oven.

Creamy Fudge Frosting

two squares bitter chocolate one-half cup milk
one cup white sugar
one quarter teaspoon salt
one tablespoon butter
one teaspoon vanilla

Add chocolate to the milk, and cook until mixture is blended, stirring constantly. Add sugar and salt, and stir until mixture boils. Continue boiling, until mixture is soft, without stirring, until a few drops of it form a soft ball when dropped into cold water, or it reaches 238 degrees. Add butter; cool until lukewarm; add vanilla, and beat until thick. If icing is too thick, add a few drops of cold milk.

Mrs. Samuel Press,
4179 Colonial Avenue, Montreal

CHEESE DESSERT

two pounds of cottage cheese two eggs
three-quarters of a cup granulated sugar one-quarter pound sweet butter sixteen graham wafers
one-half pint sour cream three tablespoons pastry flour
one teaspoon vanilla
one-half teaspoon salt

Add the salt, sugar, and vanilla to cheese. Mix well. Add the sour cream and the eggs well beaten. Add the flour, and mix well. The butter should be softened to room temperature. Add to it the graham wafers, crushed. Using three-quarters of the graham wafer and butter mixture, make a layer on the bottom of a pan, nine inches by nine inches. Pour the batter into the pan, and sprinkle the rest of the graham wafer mixture on top. Bake at 350 degrees for thirty minutes and then lower the temperature to 300 for another twenty minutes.

Was Migration Expert Of HIAS

Siegmund Lifschitz, migration expert for the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society (HIAS), 425 Lafayette Street, died in New York, at Mount Sinai Hospital after a two months' illness. Mr. Lifschitz, who lived at 314 West 100th Street, was 32 years old.

Born in Berlin, where his father, Samuel, was director of immigration for the Berlin Hilfscerein, a pre-Nazi Jewish welfare agency that worked closely with HIAS, the son left Germany in 1933 to study in London. He came to the U.S. in 1938 and became a member of the consultant's division of HIAS.

Mr. Lifschitz became an American citizen in 1943 and served with the United States infantry in France. When he returned to HIAS, he was made chief of the consultant's division and helped coordinate immigration matters for the agency in its 102 worldwide offices. He leaves his parents and his wife, the former Esther Baws, whom he married shortly before his fatal illness.

MONTREAL MEETINGS

(Additional Montreal Meetings on Pages Three and Four)

● Dr. Joseph H. Lookstein, for twenty-five years rabbi of the Orthodox congregation, Kehillath Jeshurun, in New York, will speak over the ABC Network at 10 a.m., E.S.T., each Sunday in December on the "Message of Israel". Professor at the Yeshiva University and the Rabbi Isaac Elchanan Theological Seminary, Rabbi Lookstein is a founder of the Hebrew Teachers' Training School for Girls, and of the unique Ramaz Jewish Day School, where children receive a comprehensive Jewish and general education from kindergarten through high school. Dr. Lookstein is chairman of the Administrative Council of the Mizrachi Organization, the religious party of the Zionist movement; and of the Latin-American Committee of the Joint Distribution Committee. He is also a chairman of the National Jewish Welfare Board and visited World War II battle zones. The "Message of Israel", which Rabbi Jonah B. Wise has conducted ever since 1934 as the only nationally broadcast weekly Jewish religious service, features great songs of the synagogue since the 13th century sung by the choir of New York City's 100-year old Central Synagogue.

● MIZRACHI 18th national convention, held at Adath Israel Synagogue, was attended by over four hundred delegates. Rabbi S. M. Zambrowsky, of Montreal, is executive president. A presidium consists of Hyman Bessin for Ottawa, who will also serve as chairman of the administrative committee. B. Tannenbaum, of Montreal; Dr. Judah Washer, of Toronto. Rabbi Wolf Gold, of Jerusalem; Rabbi Max Kirshblum, executive vice-president of the Mizrachi Organization of America; Rabbi O. Fasman, president, Hebrew Theological College, of Chicago, Ill.; spoke. Among the resolutions adopted were a project for building a Mizrachi city in Kyriat Medrashie; a vote of thanks to Canadian Government, for their support to the State of Israel and urging the Government to support the Israeli stand on Jerusalem; to inaugurate a national drive for fifteen thousand new members; development of a youth movement; strengthening of Hachshara for the training of pioneers. Other officers include: Rabbi Zvi [illegible], of Montreal; A. Kurtz, of Toronto; N. Chmelnitsky, of Winnipeg; Becker, of Vancouver; [illegible] Sokol, of Toronto; Joseph Wolinsky, of Winnipeg; M. Pollack, of Quebec; B. Goldstein, N. A. Levitsky, J. Sternthal, S. Mestel, L. Shiff, J. Kraminor, A. Ostrofsky, of Montreal; J. Zeifman, Harry Korolnick, S. Wortzman, of Toronto; Myer Drazin, M. Zhar, of Ottawa.

● Independent club is being formed of girls between the ages of twenty-two and twenty-four. Call Miss Isabelle Weinstein, Cr. 6529; Miss Molly Levitt, CR. 8983.

AID TO ISRAEL

of the World Zionist Organization at the World Zionist congress in Israel next summer.

And, in answer to Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion of Israel, who recently told world Jewry that only Israeli citizens could have a share in shaping the policies of the new state, Mr. Frisch said that the Z. O. A. was not trying to influence the policies of Israel. He insisted, however, that the interests of general Zionism shall not be impaired.

As to the attitude of American Zionists toward Israel, Mr. Frisch said:

"We stand behind the duly elected Government of Israel. It is not for us as American citizens either to seek to influence its actions or to assume responsibility for its policies."

He stressed that American Jews were an integral part of the American community. In no way is their political allegiance, he said, affected by the emergence of the State of Israel.

"The American Jews owe their political allegiance to the Government of the United States, while citizens of Israel owe theirs to the Government of the State of Israel," Mr. Frisch asserted. He declared, however, that such a political separation did not imply any severance of the cultural, religious and sentimental bonds between the American Jewish community and Israel.

Commentaries

By Dr. Harry J. Stern, Rabbi

"And Isaac brought her into his mother Sarah's tent, and took Rebecca, and she became his wife; and he loved her. And Isaac was comforted for his mother." Genesis; 24:67.

In the past week's Torah portion we are introduced to a parent's anxiety to see a child united in marriage to one who is a worthy partner. Abraham's last and greatest wish was that his son, Isaac, be fitted to carry on the family tradition. In order for Isaac to succeed in doing so, he had to have a life companion with kinship of belief and ideals. Thus Eliezer is entrusted with the mission of finding a wife for Abraham's son.

Eliezer, faithful, tested, and tried servant of Abraham, sets out upon his sacred mission and we have in the twenty-fourth chapter of the book of Genesis one of the grandest narratives. Who is not touched by the beauty and simplicity of the description when Eliezer meets Rebecca at the well at eventide; when the maidens gather at the well to obtain water:

Eliezer at once recognizes the nobility of character possessed by Rebecca when she gives him water to quench his thirst, and volunteers to give "drink also to his camels". After Eliezer tells Rebecca's family of his mission and she in turn consents to travel with him back to Abraham and to meet Isaac, we read how Isaac brought her into his mother's tent and she became his wife and Isaac was comforted for his mother.

The Rabbis point out that as long as Sarah was alive there was a halo around the home. When Sarah died that halo disappeared. The doors of that home when Sarah was alive were wide open so that the needy might come. When Sarah died these doors were closed. The Sabbath light when Sarah was alive had a special radiance, but that ceased when Sarah died.

However, when Isaac brought Rebecca into the home that old glory, that old radiance returned. The same atmosphere of kindness, love, and piety of Sarah's days was restored. No wonder Isaac was comforted after the death of his mother. For [illegible] Abraham's home [illegible]

[illegible] many forces made for the survival of the Jewish [illegible] one of the greatest of forces had been the Jewish home. [illegible] Englishman, home was his castle but to the Jew his home was ever his shrine. No matter what hostility existed towards the Jew in the world outside, when he entered his home he was a prince among men, a high priest ministering at a sacred altar in family union and in family communion.

Even as the Christian home is on the decline, so is it equally true of the Jewish home. No longer is home a place of faith and prayer. For most people, home has become "a filling station by day and a parking station by night." Behold, the skyrocketing incidents of divorce and separation! Behold, the conflicts between parents and youth! Many forces have caused the disruption of the home, industrialization, secularization, and the mad rush for the making of money. Hence, the breakdown of morals in society, generally, because the home is no longer the motivating power for the building of character. Children in the home seem to get along without parents. There is no moral growth of children where there is no strong family unity.

It is in the bosom of the family that children first learn consideration, sharing and sacrifice. In the home, children learn to conquer fear and to find a sense of security when in particular the home atmosphere is dominated by parental love and affection. The family should be the very laboratory where children learn respect for person, reverence for life, and obligation to society.

There are too many homes today in Jewish life that are broken homes. There are too many so-called Jewish homes that are de-Judaized, where no longer are there heard words of prayer or words of Torah. The Jewish mother of these homes is no longer the artist as were the mothers of yore. Instead of being creative, even in the culinary arts by special recognition which was taken of the holidays, she today finds her inspiration for "the home beautiful" chiefly in what she can buy.

It would be well that the Jewish mother turn to the Jewish sources of inspiration such as the Jewish day observances, Jewish literature, Jewish song and poetry and once more create that peculiar Jewish atmosphere of beauty which has characterized Jewish family life. Indeed, there is a great mystic joy in the observance of the Kiddush on a Sabbath Eve; in singing the zemirot, the table songs, which so much enchanted Jewish family life and made for family comradeship.

The home must become once more a shrine and a place of refuge so that the modern Jew may find that peace of mind of which he is so much in need. The relaxation offered by commercialized amusement is but temporary and does not constitute vital food for the human spirit. The family must be restored in all its beauty, for, upon the foundation of the family rests the hope of the community and the nation.

If we return to the nobility of Jewish family life we shall be less concerned with the fads of the day and we shall have regained a splendid stature. If we but translate in our lives the melody of Judaism, we shall be happier and our children will walk this earth with increased dignity and with surer knowledge of the mission of the Jew in this chaotic and revolutionary age.

passage of a Senate resolution for "a full-dress review" of America's future denazification policy in Germany.

Another resolution addressed to the Federal Government asked that the United States withdraw its support from "the unrealistic recommendations" of the United Nations Palestine Conciliation Commission for the internationalization of Jerusalem. The convention called for dissolution of the commission because of "its failure after months of negotiations to bring the Jews and Arabs together in direct negotiations."

The convention also adopted a resolution advocating a revised Displaced Persons Act free of special preferences for any group because of race or religion and prohibiting admission of persons taking part in the persecution of others because of race or religion.

THE RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE JEWISH LAITY TO DEVELOP HABITS OF LEARNING

Speech To The Jewish Theological Seminary Of America, In New York

By Simon H. Rifkind, Of New York, Judge Of The United States District Court; Former Adviser On Jewish Affairs To General Eisenhower In The European Theatre Of Operations

When we consider the position of the lay leadership in Jewish life and especially in Jewish religious life in America, we know, of course, the words "Jewish Laity" are in a sense self-contradictory. Jewish tradition knows no such classification as that of clergy and laity. As far as I have been able to discover the Jews never had a word for it.

One would suppose that a civilization as old as the Jews would have a well defined, generally recognized line of demarcation setting off the province of the rabbinate from that of the rest of the community. After all, the rabbinate is a hoary institution in Jewish life. Surely, we would imagine that in the course of the millenia of our history the boundary between professional rabbi and lay public has been staked out. We know, of course, that much younger institutions show a sharp line of cleavage between their professional and lay participants.

In our courts of law the separation between the professional judge and the lay jury is sharply defined. In other religions there is an acknowledged and unbridgeable chasm between clergy and laity. Indeed, I think that it is from our Christian neighbors that we have borrowed the phrase.

It is a useful and convenient phrase, a handy tool for distinguishing between the professional and the non-professional participant in every important calling. Why then has not Jewish tradition made the distinction? I venture to suggest that the omission is not the product of accident.

Scripture, we know, emphasizes the very contrary, the absence of [illegible] a "Kingdom of priests and a holy people." Ideally, all the Jews were conceived of as professionals. For a long time that ideal was substantially realized in practice.

When the active priesthood vanished and religious life took on its modern appearance, Judaism in the Diaspora became a learned pursuit to which a multitude of followers gave lifelong and supreme devotion. That, by modern definition, is what we mean by a profession.

In Jewish communities throughout the ages we had a vast number of learned men who pursued and lived Judaism with the single-minded devotion and zeal of the professional although they derived no livelihood therefrom. The rabbi was one scholar among scholars; one learned man among his peers. No wonder the Jews never invented a word for laity; but they did invent and used a host of words for a classification which interested them and which they regarded as important. They differentiated sharply and vividly between the learned and the ignorant.

The consequences of this circumstance upon Jewish life until relatively very modern times were of tremendous significance. It meant that the rabbis, unlike the functionaries of other religious organizations, did not have a monopoly upon religious truth. They had power derived from knowledge which, of necessity, they shared with the learned laymen who were their neighbors.

They labored before an audience competent to judge them, differ with them and collaborate with them. They were like poets reciting their lines to an audience of poets. Because of that fact the synagogue never became a hierarchichal church. Because of it the Jewish community never became a theocracy.

It was the wide distribution of learning and knowledge which sustained democracy in Jewish communal life. Out of that equal and respected association of rabbis, scholars, and learned men of affairs Jewish life evolved coherently, made its successful adjustments to the environment and insured the survival of Jews and Judaism.

One problem runs like a continuous thread throughout our history of the past 2,000 years: how to preserve Judaism in a non-Jewish environment. Because the environment interpenetrates the Jewish community more thoroughly and pervasively than it did before the Emancipation, the problem has become more difficult — but still not insoluble.

A short story, which I tell with Dr. Greenberg's permission, illustrates my point. Once upon a time an Italian, a Spaniard, and a Jew were watching the waters of the Mediterranean from the shores of Tripoli. They were engaged in idle speculation over this problem: what would they do if the waters of that inland sea were to rise and cover all the continents which enclose it? Said the Italian, I would consume another bottle of wine so that my last hour would be as joyful as possible. I would do otherwise, said the Spaniard. I would devote the final hour to prayer so as to win salvation for my soul. And I, said the Jew, would learn to live under water.

Our ancestors did learn to live under water — in an unnatural, hostile environment. Surely, we ought to master the art of living in a non-hostile, in a neutral, if not cordial, environment. The route our fathers followed was the [illegible] it is [illegible] to prove the obvious that Jewish life in America has veered away from that route. Of the forms of democracy in the synagogue we see much more than our medieval ancestors ever dreamt about. Every proposition, whether momentous or trivial, is put to the vote of the congregation. But what of the essence of democracy, what of the knowing participation in the practical and spiritual life of the community? That seems to have escaped us.

It has escaped us because in the average Jewish community the rabbi is, to all intents and purposes, the sole repository of Jewish tradition, learning and law. There are few in his congregation prepared to contest his view if they are in disagreement, few equipped to collaborate with him when they are in agreement.

When the rabbi speaks to such an audience he necessarily speaks like an oracle because the audience is incapable of passing professional judgment. By default of the lay community, the rabbi is acquiring a monopoly upon religious knowledge. Such monopoly invariably leads to unchecked power. Unchecked power derived from the private possession of special knowledge is as unwholesome and dangerous as absolute power derived from any source.

The Englishmen who fought for Magna Charta were right when they exacted from their King a promise to apply the law of the land which tradition had made their common possession. And Moses spoke with Divine concern for the freedom of future generations when he formulated as one of his prime commandments that we shall diligently teach the Torah to our children so that it may be the common possession of all the people.

To me it seems inevitable that should the synagogue long continue as an institution in which a learned rabbi ministers to an uninstructed laity it will cease to be a synagogue and become a church. When that happens Judaism will not wear the face it has worn these thousands of years.

It is not my purpose to recite a Jeremiad. My object is to call attention to the danger of the present trend, to awaken our lay leaders to their responsibility and thus to help restore Judaism to its historic road. That it can be done I have no doubt. History is replete with examples of such recurrent revivals in Jewish life.

The indispensable prerequisite is that the lay leadership shall come to recognize its responsibility. That responsibility extends in several directions. First, lay leadership must undertake to see to it that the laity generally is better informed, that the laity develop habits of learning. That, I believe, is the central tenet of Jewish life.

I do not mean that such learning need be circumscribed by the boundaries of the sacred literature in which 17th Century Jewry was engrossed. If I grasp the significance of Judaism clearly it is not the knowledge of truth but the quest and search for truth which is the abiding principle of the Jewish way of life.

Second, Jewish lay leaders should in their own personal lives strive to exemplify standards of conduct which we can proudly call Jewish. I am not now referring to matters of ritual although they, too, play a role in the beauty, dignity and spirituality of Jewish life.

I mean specifically that they ought to exert themselves so to order their ordinary affairs as to make evident that they regard the ennoblement of the human personality as their principal aim, that they differentiate good from evil and have the character to prefer the good, that they exhibit courage in adversity, steadfastness in danger, humility when in power, manliness under oppression, magnanim[illegible]

[illegible] that they pursue [illegible] not because they are profitable, but when they are profitable, but pursue them relentlessly even when they involve pain and travail.

In other words, I regard it as one of the obligations of lay leadership that they constitute themselves visible exemplars of how estimable life can be when enhanced and exalted by the application of Jewish traditional values. Manifestly, that is a task which the rabbi cannot perform for us. The rabbi's superior scholarship and more prolonged application may help us reinterpret Jewish tradition in modern terms, but the day to day task of living in the pattern of the high ideals of that tradition cannot be delegated, cannot be performed for us by proxy.

The direct consequence of the discharge of this responsibility would, of course, be felt in each of our own lives. The indirect consequences would also be enormous, for the warranted increase in our own self-esteem would inevitably bring an increase in the esteem in which we are held by others. Membership in the Jewish community would become a badge of honor. To be known as a Jew would amount to recognition as the holder of a patent of nobility. I can think of no more precious heritage to leave to our children.

Sometimes, in an idle moment, I wonder whether we have wisely budgeted the time, talent, money, and effort which now go into Jewish activities. I wonder whether a more substantial proportion of this activity ought not be directed toward the affirmation of Jewish life and values, toward the improvement of our common American life by the catalytic effect of Jewish ideas, toward its enrichment with Jewish idealism, so that the Jewish community might, indeed, be, and be seen as, a blessing to the American people.

I think the answer is yes. I know that Judaism bids us wager our salvation on the assumption that the answer is yes. And I am sure that the execution of such an enterprise is not a rabbinical task but an undertaking for laymen.

The third step in the discharge of the responsibility of the Jewish laity is that it resume the initiative. Are we not expecting too much of our rabbis when we look to them for deep scholarship and reflection and at the same time expect them to be dynamos of civic action, energizing and activating the community. Generally speaking, we rarely find the two capacities united in a single individual.

I am convinced that in the field of action the laymen ought to assume the initiative and develop the necessary staying power. The laymen must create and sustain those institutions without which nothing of what I have spoken can materialize.

Putting first things first, I say that the primary task calling for attention is the expansion and perfection of our educational institutions. In Jewish life they command top priority. They represent the indispensable condition to all other improvements in our communal life.

We need a tenfold increase in the number of our teachers. We ought to mobilize the hundreds and thousands of brilliant young women in our colleges and universities for careers in Jewish teaching and incidentally in Jewish homemaking.

We have hardly begun to scratch the surface in providing continuous life-long education for our adults. Without it, Judaism may become an empty ritual. No community of Jews, no matter how small or big, ought to be without its adult classroom, without some assembly devoted to the contemplation of the things that really matter.

In this great Seminary, in this University of Judaism where scholars abide, we have the nucleus for the generation of such an expan[illegible] These scholars have done [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]
